Announcing an innovation that may help you breathe easier!

Midwest ENT is excited to be among the first in the United States to offer the SINUVA sinus implant, recently approved by the FDA to treat nasal polyps in adults who have had previous ethmoid sinus surgery (ESS). SINUVA is a non-surgical option that is placed during a routine physician office visit. It is clinically proven to reduce nasal congestion and polyps.

SINUVA opens in the sinus and delivers anti-inflammatory medicine to treat nasal polyps.

Let's talk about kids.

Does your child struggle with constant ear infections? Do you frequent the doctor's office and have tried numerous antibiotics only to still experience sleepless nights and face concerns about permanent damage to your child's hearing? Then you join the countless number of parents and caregivers who suffer the same circumstances. Next to the common cold, ear infections in children rank high on the list of childhood illnesses. And while it may be common, that doesn't mean it's any less frustrating, concerning or problematic.

From first-time caregivers and parents to those who have experience with ear infections in children, the bottom line is that each infection and treatment can vary. It's important to first understand the basics of the infection to truly recognize the symptoms. "Ear infections are caused when the Eustachian tube that connects the middle ear to the back of the throat gets swollen or blocked by congestion or mucus," says Daniel Todd, MC, FACS of Midwest Ear, Nose and Throat. "The fluid then builds up in the middle ear making it prone to infection from bacteria and viruses. While most children eventually grow out of chronic ear infections as their ears develop with age, it's still vital to take immediate action.
